Q.211-225. Read the following passage carefully and answer the questions given below it. Certain word / phrases have been printed in bold to help you locate them while answering some of the questions.

The modern world requires to repose trust in many anonymous institutions. We strap ourselves in a flying tin can with two hundred other people not because not because we know the pilot out because we believe that airline travel is safe. Our trust in these institutions depends on two factors : skills and ethics. We expect that the people who run these institutions know what they are doing, that they build and operate machines the work as they are supposed to and that they are looking out for our welfare even thought we are strangers. When one of these factors is weak or absent, trust breaks down and we either pay a high price in safety—as in the Bhopal tragedy—or a large ‘welfare premium’ such as the elaborate security measures at airports. Trust-deficient environments work in the favour of the rich and powerful, who can command premium treatment and afford welfare premiums. Poor people can command neither, which is why air travel is safer than train travel, which in turn is safer than walking by the road side. Every modern society depends on the trust in the skills and ethics of a variety of institutions such as schools and colleges, hospital and markets. If we stopped believing in the expertise of our teachers, doctors and engineers, we will stop being a modern society.

As The Institution among institutions, it is the duty of the state to ensure that all other institutions meet their ethical obligations. The Indian state has failed in its regulatory role. Consequently, we cannot trust our schools to turn out good graduates, we cannot ensure that our colleges turn out well trained engineers and we cannot guarantee that our engineers will turn out to be good products.

Last year, I was invited to speak at an undergraduate research conference. Most of the participants in this conference were students at the best engineering colleges in the State. One student who was driving me back and forth recounted a story about the previous year’s final exam. One of this papers had a question from a leading textbook to which the textbook’s answer was wrong. The student was in a dilemma: should he write the (wrong) answer as given in the textbook or should he write the right answer using his own analytical skills. He decided to do the later and received a zero on that question. Clearly, as the student had suspected, the examiners were looking at the textbook answer while correcting the examination papers instead of verifying its correctness.

The behaviour of these examiners is breakdown of institutional morals, with consequences for the skills acquired by students. I say institutional morals, for the failure of these examiners is not a personal failure. At the same conference

I met a whole range of college teachers, all of whom were drafted as examiners at some time or the other. Without exception, they were dedicated individuals who cared about the education and welfare of their students. However, when put in the institutional role of evaluating an anonymous individual, they fail in fulfilling their responsibilities. When some of our best colleges are run in this fashion, is it any wonder that we turn out unskilled engineers and scientists? If, as we are led to expect, there is a vast increase in education at all levels and the regulatory regime is as weak as it is currently, isn't likely that the trust deficit is only going to increase?

We are all of the consequences of ignoring corruption at all levels of society. While institutional failures in governance are obvious, I think the real problem lies deeper, in the failure of every day institutions that are quite apart from institutions that impinge on our lives only on rare occasions. It is true that our lives are made more miserable by government officials demanding bribes for all sorts of things, but what about the everyday lying and cheating and breaking of rule with people who are strangers?

Let me give you an example that many of us have experienced. I prefer buying my fruits and vegetables from roadside vendors rather than chain stores. To the vendor, I am probably an ideal customer, since I do not bargain and I do not take hours choosing the best pieces, instead, letting the vendor do the selecting. The market near my house is quite busy; as a result, most vendors are selling the wares to strangers. It takes a while before a particular vendor realises that I am a repeat customer. In such a situation trust is crucial. I have a simple rule: if a vendor palms off a bad piece whose defects are obvious, I never go back to that person again. It is amazing how often that happens.

211. What is the meaning of the phrase 'palms off' as used in the passage?
- (1) steals from
 - (2) hides away from
 - (3) buys quickly
 - (4) acquires a good price for
 - (5) passes on by deception
212. Why, according to the author, do people repose trust in institutions they do not know?
- (1) The marketing strategies adopted by these institutions make them trustworthy in the eyes of the public.
 - (2) Many other people before them have done the same thing thus they feel safe.
 - (3) People learn from the experiences of their richer counterparts who have availed of the services of these institutions.
 - (4) They believe that these institutions have the requisite knowledge and will act only in favour of the general public.
 - (5) These institutions charge a very high price for the services they provide which leads people to trust them.
213. Why, according to the author, is the behaviour of examiners a breakdown of institutional morals?

- (1) As the institution encourages examiners to give as little marks to students as possible.
- (2) As the institution is responsible for not encouraging examiners to venture outside the rote process.
- (3) As the examiners are told to discourage students from being creative by the institution.
- (4) As the institutions fails to provide adequate compensation to these hardworking examiners.
- (5) As the institution does not have information regarding right answers with it.
214. Which of the following is possibly the most appropriate title for the passage?
