

Since a very early age, I've been helpful and compassionate towards people around me. I would do whatever it takes to help people and make them feel better. I've begun to realize that not only does this act make me happy but it also provides me ultimate satisfaction. My keen interest and passion for being useful to people and my kind, helpful nature motivated me to pursue a career in the nursing field. Every year on my birthday, I visit old age homes and orphanage and celebrate my entire day with them. I want to dedicate my life to the service of others. I am well acquainted with the challenges I have to face in this field of profession. I wouldn't be here without the encouragement from my parents and friends. Being the daughter of a doctor, I used to visit my father's clinic every now and then. Seeing the nurses working so hard to make the ill people feel emotionally and physically better, I was inspired. I truly believe that I can be an able nurse and contribute a lot to the medical field.

My academic record has been exceptionally well since the beginning I've learned had many incredible experiences that will definitely help me in my future professional life. I've had the opportunity to be taught by the best teachers who have always cleared my doubts and were there for me whenever I needed their help. I have had a keen interest in biology subject and I was an active member of my school's science club. I've participated in a myriad of Olympiad's and science exhibitions and have represented my school at the national and international levels. I've taken benefit of as many opportunities as I can at the high school level to understand the skills and roles of a nurse. I also have good communication and leadership skills. I've been elected as my school captain. As a captain, I've fulfilled my responsibilities towards my school and community.

Working at non-profit organizations for four years has instilled many positive characteristics in me. My duties included setting up first aid camps, relief camps during natural calamities, and taking care of the injured. During that period, I've worked with many doctors and nurses which have enhanced my exposure to the medical field. I've learned about the important duties that a nurse has to do in day to day life. I have interacted with people from various fields of life and cultural backgrounds. Nurses have to be compassionate irrespective of human differences. I believe to have the ability to do so. I've also learned to work better in a team which is an important part of the nursing profession.

Studying in New Zealand is cost-friendly due to its low tuition fees and low cost of living. As an international student, it is the right study abroad destination for me as it fits my financial capabilities and academic needs. I also fulfill the entry requirements needed to study nursing at the [name of the university you're applying to]. New Zealand is a safe and culturally inclusive country for international students. The crime rate is very low and the surrounding matches my needs. Apart from academics, there are several options for work-study programs in various fields to earn some extra cash while completing my academic degree. New Zealand is a beautiful country to stay at and I want to earn experience by the community and people of the country. The degree from your university will help me get top jobs in the future and will be very beneficial in my career as well as will help me during my further academic life.

The nursing degree at [name of the university you're applying to] will allow me to understand more about the specializations in nursing, I also want to learn about the medical field. Currently, I'm deeply interested in surgical nursing. The top-notch research facilities in your university can help me excel in the nursing field and fulfill my dreams. Your university has the best laboratories for biology and microbiology experiments. I want to be helpful to the community and serve people. I'm the right fit for the bachelor's nursing program at your university. I fulfill all the entry requirements stated for the course by your university. The extensive curriculum of your university will allow me to learn the fundamentals. I'm very much excited to be taught by [name of the faculty] as he is the best in the field. And I'm looking forward to a fruitful and effective journey at your university. I assure you that I'll prove my efficiency, both academically and personally, and will be an asset to your university.